

The Football Match

Last Saturday we went to a football match. We travelled on the bus. It was a very important match and there was a huge shiny trophy for the best team.

There was a large crowd at the match.
"Did you remember the tickets?" I asked my Dad
"Yes, I remembered the tickets" he said.
"Did you remember the popcorn?" he asked.
"Oh no, I did not remember it!" I said.

The teams ran on to the pitch . "Did you notice the new striker?" Ryan asked. "Yes, I noticed him, he looks very skilful" I replied.

My Dad visited the toilet.

The match started and the new striker kicked for the goal!

"Did the goal keeper save that ball?" Ryan said.

"No, he did not save it! Our team are winning!" I shouted.

My Dad walked back to his seat.
"Did I miss anything?" he asked.

"Yes, you missed a goal Dad!" I answered.

Then the red team tackled our striker. He kicked the player!
"Did he tackle fairly?" my Dad said.
The referee held up a red card.
"No, he did not tackle fairly. He is sending him off the pitch!"

Now the red team had only 10 players on the football pitch . The red player had fouled our striker. He said sorry to the other player.

My Dad went to buy popcorn.

Then the blue team scored another goal. The player headed the ball. "Did he head the ball into the goal?" I said.

"Yes, he headed a goal!" Ryan shouted.

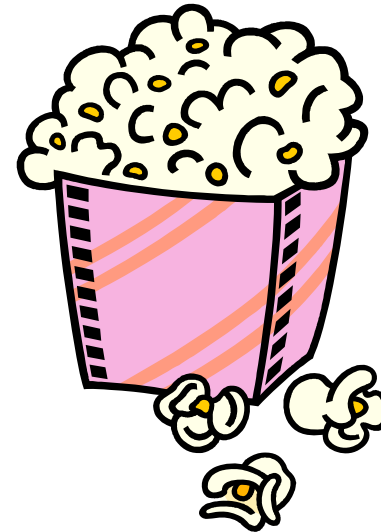

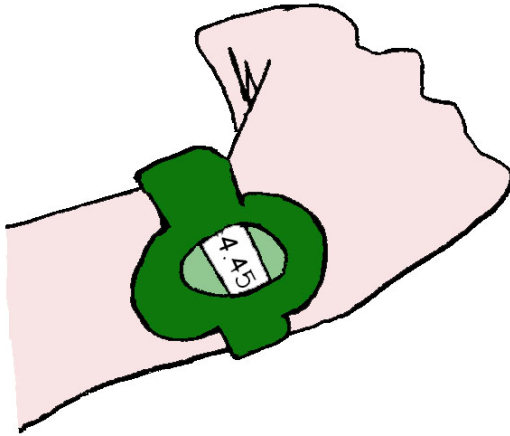

"Did you watch the keeper?" I said.
"Yes, we watched him, he was too slow!" my friends answered.

My Dad came back. "Did I miss anything?"
"Yes, you missed a great goal!" I replied.
My Dad was upset.
"Sorry I did not remember the popcorn" I said.

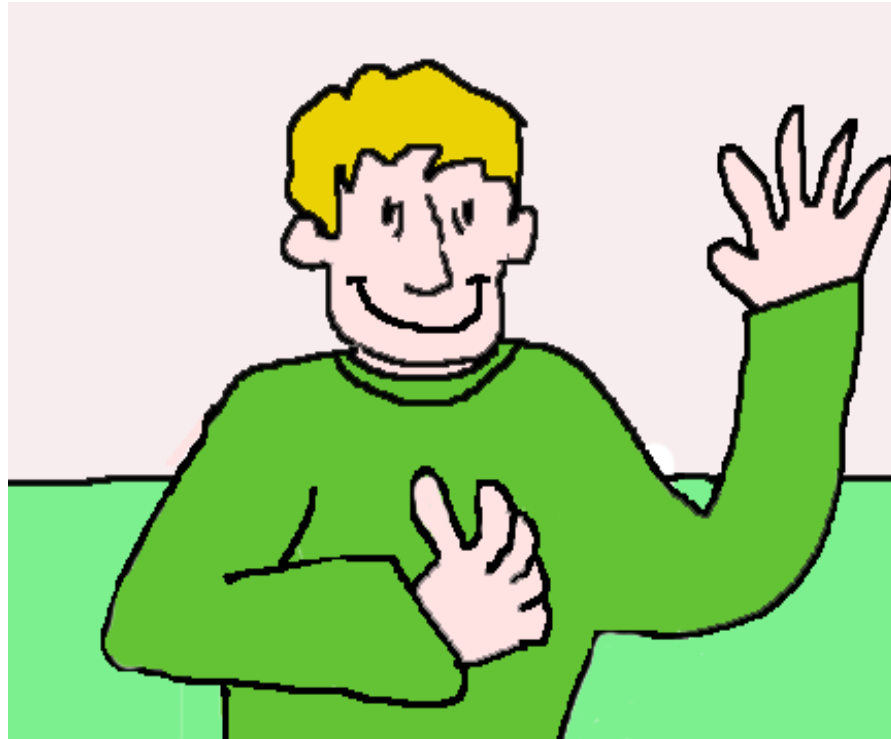

It was time for the match to finish.
The referee blew the final whistle. Our team had won the trophy!

Did we celebrate?
Yes we celebrated with popcorn.
"Thanks for fetching the popcorn Dad" I said.

"Did you enjoy the match Dad?" I said
"I enjoyed the popcorn!" my Dad laughed.

The End
